

Envelope Guide

Envelopes are available in many standard sizes, configurations, flap styles and paper types. Most often, envelopes are purchased for printing directly on to the formed envelope. Envelopes that require bleeding images must first be printed on flat sheets and then converted/formed in to the envelope shape.

Booklet and Catalog Envelopes

Booklet envelopes have the opening/flap along the long envelope dimension. Catalog envelopes have the opening/flap along the short envelope dimension. For automated insertion of contents for mailing requires use of a booklet envelope format.

The type of envelope closure required (ie. standard gummed/glue, peel and seal, self-adhesive, etc.) will dictate availability of larger envelope sizes.
